were all sea-sick ~ Seven Days we rocked and tossed ~*

*Seven days of this can make one weak
(Pardon the joke ~ seven days ~ one week ~ get it)
But at the time it was no laughing matter.*

Water was beginning to pour into our galley ~ unless the storm subsided our food and cargo would be ruined.

My men marvelled at how I managed to keep our ship afloat.

MY! HOW EXCITING!
AND YOU NEVER GOT

KATY SEES STARS

the perfect answer to any doubter as to his physical resemblance to a CID man.

After seeing his performance in the Washington stage production of "Dial M" two years ago, Margaret Truman advised Williams that he was a ringer for Inspector Threadwell, the Scotland Yard man assigned to the ex-President's daughter when she was a London tourist.

FILM ACTOR WALKS INTO LIONS' DEN

Actor Sean McClory doubled for his double in a sequence of "Ring of Fear." Scene was originally scheduled to show Sean (impersonated by a double) stepping into the big cage filled with lions and tigers.

At the last minute Clyde Beatty, famed lion trainer who had been coaching McClory, was able to persuade director James Edward Grant that Sean, who was all for the idea, was a natural born lion trainer and could safely perform the scene himself. So the double was given a reprieve as McClory entered the cage with chair, whip and pistol.

Beatty, who stars in the picture, beamed at the workmanlike performance of his protégé, but complained, "The only trouble is nobody will believe Sean did it. They'll still say it was a double."

ACTOR REEL DOUBLE FOR YARD COPPER

John Williams, who plays the Scotland Yard inspector in "Dial M for Murder," has

ROMAN BEAUTY DELICIOUS PIPPIN

ROME—The most beautiful woman in the world eats sandwiches for breakfast, washes her face with olive oil, and likes to walk barefoot.

Rossana Podesta, when she was chosen for "Helen of Troy," is a 19-year-old Italian girl. So far, she is fetchingly unaware of her superior charms, taking the reasonable attitude that if people like her looks, she's happy she's an actress because they can see more of her that way—especially in Cinema Scope.

To Rossana the fact that she eats sandwiches for breakfast is just as reasonable. She has a lusty morning appetite and she's crazy about sandwiches.

"I understand some people eat steak for breakfast," she says. "How strange!"

The actress attributes her satin complexion to the olive oil treatment and to the fact that she shuns fancy facial creams.

Her barefoot whims stem from the girl's love of the outdoors. You can find her almost any day in her Roman apartment—unshod and unbearably beautiful.

BREATH OF SPRING

Robert Cummings on the set of "Dial M for Murder" explains how he keeps his boyish looks this way:

"I think deep breathing exercises are the best means of helping a person keep looking young. I take 350 deep breaths each morning as soon as I get out of bed."

AT HOME ON LOCATION

Greer Garson will have her shortest location trip on record when she makes "Strange Lady in Town." Producer-director Mervyn LeRoy plans to shoot most of the film on and about her New Mexico ranch.

PAWNED GUITAR PAYS OFF ACTOR

Four years ago Fess Parker, then a student at the University of Texas, spotted a guitar in a pawn shop in Austin. He bought it, deciding that the ability to play a guitar might be useful some day.

It's proven just that for the young actor. He is currently portraying a guitar-strumming marine from Texas in the Cinema-Scope production "Battle Cry," starring Van Heflin, Aldo Ray, James Whitmore and Tab Hunter.

GIFTS GIVE STARS ROOM FOR CONCERN

One of the things about being a movie star is that people from all over the world whom you've never met or seen send you gifts, most of which are as welcome as a sore thumb.

Not that stars like Doris Day, who receives a steady flow of these tokens and trinkets, don't appreciate the sentiment behind the giving. They do.

But finding a place and a use for some of the objects poses a problem.

Within the past twelve months, Doris has received a 10-foot totem pole from a fan club in Alaska, a shrunken head from the Amazon-country, a baby alligator from Florida, a voodoo mask from Haiti, and a rhinotoothed necklace from East Africa, to name a few of the more unusual.

Many feminine admirers forward homemade Doris Day dolls and their pet recipes for candy and pastry, including samples.

Fans in Maryland have sent her by air express shipments of terrapin and oysters. An orange grower in California has named a tree for her and sends her in installments the entire harvest from the Day tree.

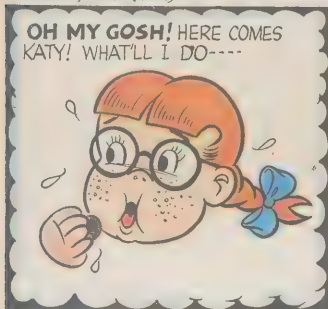

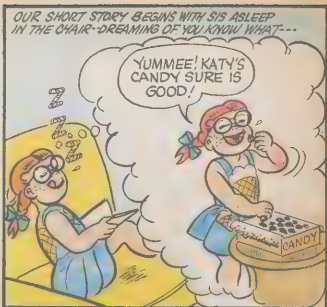

From Switzerland Doris received a combination barometer-thermometer-calendar. The illustration on this ingenious piece varies according to temperature changes. The lists of friendship-tokens could go on and on.

Four important castings, two of them from the original air shows, were announced this week for "Dragnet," the full-length feature film with Jack Webb starring and directing and Stanley Meyer producing.

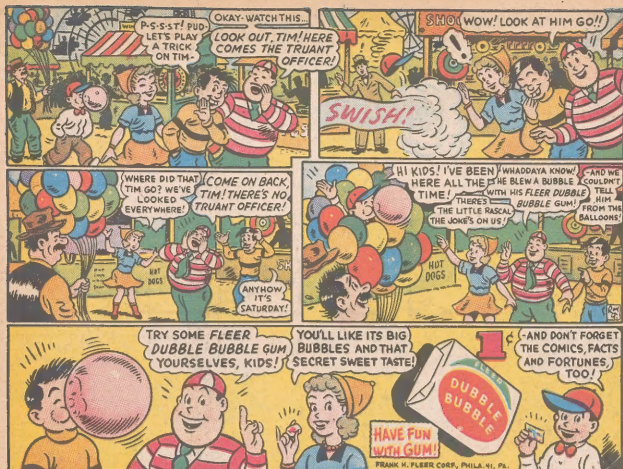

Ann Robinson, femme lead in "The War of the Worlds," has been set for one of the top spots supporting Webb. Also cast for key roles are Virginia Gregg, who appears frequently on the "Dragnet" series, and Georgia Ellis, well-known radio actress.

Ben Alexander, Jack Webb's police partner in the "Dragnet" TV and radio shows, has been signed to play the same role in the motion picture.
